

PAINES LANE CEMETERY: THE TRANSCRIPTS OF MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS

In 1989, members of the Pinner Local History Society started the recording of the monumental inscriptions in the old cemetery in Paines Lane, Pinner. Those inscriptions that were still visible after the weather, pollution and vandalism had each attacked the stones were recorded on separate slips. On the reverse of the slips was noted additional information from the burial registers, the grave registers and the day book, held either at the Harrow Reference Library or at the Harrow Weald Cemetery in Clap Hill. Occasional information was obtained elsewhere, from newspapers, parish registers or street directories.

This typed transcript is a copy of most of the information contained on the slips. Names of officiating ministers recorded on some slips have not been included, but the information is available if required. Where there was serious divergence from one source to another, details were checked in the indexes of the General Register Office at St. Catherine's House, London.

An index to the transcripts was published by this Society in 1994, edited by Iris J. Long, and entitled Pinner Old Cemetery, Paines Lane. It contains a useful Introduction and a plan of the grave lay-out.

THE LISTS

These lists give the following information:

Column 1

- a) Grave number. (There are five blocks of graves in the cemetery, Block C containing Nonconformist graves.)
- b) A brief description of the memorial stone.
(As these details were noted by different people, there may be different amounts of detail recorded here.)
HS; FS: Headstone; Footstone
Kerbs: The kerbstone round the boundary of the plot, often with small pillars at the corner.
Chips: Small granite chippings may cover the grave space.
3-stepped cross: A cross (usually Latin) on three bases of diminishing size. Inscriptions may be found on the cross or on any or all of the three steps.
Slab: A horizontal stone at ground level.
Table: A rectangular grave shaped like an altar.
Urn: A flower container, usually loose on the grave.

(Note: The stones that were found to be damaged in 1989/90 are so recorded in this column. Names in brackets are those of masons.)

Column 2

The Memorial Inscriptions

To make the lists easier to read, they have been mostly typed in lower case letters, even though the inscriptions are usually in capitals.

Names in capitals are of people buried in the grave; relatives listed on the memorials are shown in lower case. An oblique stroke (/) signifies the end of a line in the original inscription.

Words in brackets are either so carved on the stone or are estimated readings where the lettering is now obscure. Dots indicate missing letters.

Punctuation on the stones is fairly arbitrary, and weathering has in many instances obliterated the original marks. N,S,E,W: these initials refer to the faces of the kerbs or steps facing north, south, east or west respectively. 1,2,3: these refer to the steps of the plinths supporting a cross or other memorial, in descending order.

When transcribing Biblical or other quotations, or pious phrases, capital letters have been used for the Deity; apologies are offered if the use or absence of capitals elsewhere in the quotations has caused offence.

Column 3

The last column in the lists records extra information contained in the registers or other sources mentioned above.

Name variants are in lower case.

Bur.Reg.: Burial Register: a chronological list of burials. (A separate book is kept for Nonconformist burials in Plot C.)

Gr.Reg.: Grave Register: this lists all those buried in each grave space, whether or not a memorial was erected. (Current registers are with the Cemetery Superintendent at Clap Hill; earlier volumes are in the Harrow reference Library.) There is an alphabetical index of all burials in the cemetery.

Registers after May 1931 give place of domicile as well as place of death.

Notes

Information given on the stones may not necessarily be correct; we have noted several discrepancies of dates or ages between the stones and the written registers. We have done our best by frequent cross-checking to ensure the accuracy of these transcripts, but enquirers are advised to check for themselves, both in the cemetery and in the relevant written records.

It should be noted that an inscription may not contain the names of all those buried in the grave: a husband may, for instance, put up a stone for his wife, but when he dies there is no-one left to record his passing. Conversely, not all those recorded on the stone may be buried there: some may have died overseas, have been killed in wartime or have been cremated. Names of those buried in the grave but not recorded on the stone are listed in the right-hand column of the transcripts.

Even over the few months when recording took place, further damage occurred to the stones and it became sometimes impossible to check the original inscription. The growth of vegetation, too, often made reading difficult.

Ways to use the information

Genealogists may find some of the inscriptions helpful in supplying additional information, for instance about parentage or birth (grave A5) or about causes of death (C 20) or careers (C 319, "an X-Ray hero").

Sociologists may find much of interest by studying the various fashions of monumental design, or the changing styles of Biblical quotation, or the various euphemisms for death (fell asleep, passed on, called to the higher service, passed to his rest, departed, called home, absent from the body, taken by God, entered into everlasting life, to whom the gates of new life opened, taken from us, etc.).

Apart from the graves of members of well-known local families, such as the Ellements, Wealls, Beaumonts, Heals, Gurneys, Hedges, Woodbridges or Pendrys, there are a number of people of interest in these lists. (See the booklet, Pinner Old Cemetery, Paines Lane for details.)
